OpenTofu Overview Document

OpenTofu is an open-source infrastructure as code platform created as a fork of Terraform. It was developed to ensure the ecosystem remains community-driven and openly licensed. Teams use OpenTofu to define, provision, and manage cloud infrastructure using declarative configuration files. Because it is compatible with many Terraform modules, migration is usually straightforward. Organizations adopt OpenTofu when they want transparency, governance, and vendor-neutral tooling.